President's Message

Coach Training and Neurodiversity

When searching the terms “Coaching and Neuroscience” on Google, it is easy to find pages of coach training programs that include concepts of neuroscience to teach coaches how to work more effectively with clients. What I noticed was the lack of information on how to teach adult students who are neurodiverse, have learning difficulties or executive function challenges.

Not all coach training organizations have easy access to that information or may not recognize issues when they arise. My faculty and staff are trained in neurodiversity as well, so that we can provide an equitable and inclusive learning experience for all of our students.

November ACTO FORUM

Coaching Through the Lens of Diversity

Coaching relationship is about co-creating and partnering. Being able to see different dimensions of diversity within oneself and within our clients gives us an opportunity to establish trust and intimacy at a deeper level.

In this session we will be:

- Expanding our capacity to look through the lens of diversity in every coaching engagement.
- Leveraging polarity model to learn how to connect with our similarities 'AND' our differences.
- Learning how to co-create a coaching relationship based on 'I-Thou' rather than 'I-It'.

ACTO Announces Scholarship Process

Application Process Opens January 1, 2021

The Association for Coach Training Organizations (ACTO) brings coach training to aspiring coaches around the world. ACTO offers an annual scholarship to two (2) deserving individuals who demonstrate a desire for coach training and who best meet the objectives of the scholarship requirements.

This opportunity is open to prospective students who are in need of financial support and willing to complete coach training from one of ACTO's member participating schools.
