President's Message

Dear ACTO members,

It is a pleasure and privilege to be able to serve you through the platform of an 'evolving' ACTO. There is much to accomplish in the times to come, and we invite and seek your active engagement. I chose to say yes to being the president at ACTO because it is a way for me to contribute back to a profession that has nourished me and helped me evolve into a better human being. I wish to focus my message today on evolution within the coaching field and its impact on coach training.

As the world evolves, so does coaching, and hence coach training. Whether this evolution is a conscious one is completely in our hands and hearts as coach trainers.

I often ask myself questions around the nature of the coach training I am invested in. Here are some questions that I think about.

- Is the coach training reactive and serves a need that has already been articulated over the past few months or years?
- Is the training informed by framework and structures pioneered by others and I fit in my own design process into this frame in order to be relevant?
- Does the coach training tap into the evolutionary impulse and I design coach training from the field of possibility - a field that informs who coaches will be over the next decade?

The choice making around the above mentioned options leads to specific design choices for our curriculum and more importantly how we teach and train.

So what are the distinctions around these design choices?

You Get What You Give

We invite you to get involved in an ACTO Committee!

As we get started with another robust and exciting year here at ACTO, the Board of Directors would like to take a moment to warmly invite each and every member to get involved in an ACTO committee. Those members who get involved in committee projects routinely report that they feel more connected to and get so much more out of their ACTO membership than when they sit by on the sidelines. We need and want you to get involved!
